No local resistance leaders or organization, however, are known to exist in the area from Tomorrice to Erseke, and there is no open resistance to the government forces. The people have not, in fact, the wherewithal for such resistance, since they lack arms, ammunition, medicines, and clothing.

3. [redacted] the general feeling of the population in the area [redacted] is that the Hoxha government cannot last long, and that if Hoxha and Shehu were eliminated, general revolt would come immediately. [redacted]

4. There are evidences of discord among the Communists. Some of them tell concentration camp inmates that the judgment government will come soon. Because of such statements population feels that not all Communists are to be remain in the Party merely as a matter of survival.
